

Masalembu Waters

This accident happened in 1880. A ship named Tampomas II was burned down in the middle of the storm in Masalembu Waters, Indonesia.

When the main ship has sunk, you soon realize that you are now in a lifeboat consist of 16 passengers (including you). You then are the first person to find a guideline of how to use the lifeboat, and it is written there, that actually the maximum capacity of the lifeboat is only 8 passengers.

You notice that the water is starting to get into the lifeboat. You can't see any sign that rescuers are coming for your group and you can't see any land as well.

From a quick voting, you are now appointed as the leader of the lifeboat. For everyone's safety you have to decide who has to get out of the lifeboat first. Make a priority list from the 1st until the 16th person who has to get out of the lifeboat.
